Life can change in a split second. Nobody knows that better than Louisiana mother Holly Wagner, whose 11-month-old son Cameron died in a car crash because he was not properly fastened in his car seat. Now, Wagner wants to share her story so other parents don’t experience the same tragedy. According to updated guidelines by the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) infants and toddlers should ride in a rear-facing seat until they are at least 2 years old or until they reach the highest weight or height allowed by the car seat’s manufacturer. Wagner wasn’t aware of that, so Cameron’s car seat faced the front.
